Wonderful Words of Life

Welcome
 Scarlett Jane Blumer

~ Our newest grandbaby~
 born June 27th

Our family has exponentially grown to six grandchildren. We will have to wait to see her, as we have the others. However, we thank God for her safe delivery, and to be able to see them again soon. Our sending church has asked us to attend the annual missions conference in October. We have so much to share with you as we will be visiting some of you in the eastern states too! Look for us!

A teacher may touch a life, but to teach someone how to lead someone to Christ affects someone else's eternity. We had a circumstance in May, where two students were able to practice soul winning because a young man offended his classmate. She was so upset, she couldn't bring herself to even be in the same room with him, she didn't show up for school for days. As word got around, others got involved. By the time we caught wind, scandal had broken out. Sin was on a rampage, injuring and confusing; gossip and fear prevailed. Then came Jesus. I pulled two of the boys in at the same time, usually I work one on one but this time I knew one wasn't saved and the other was. He was trying to give his friend advice (albeit, after he became part of the problem by gossiping). We resolved after our meeting that apologies were in order immediately.

They would have to endure the long weekend knowing what they had to face. I met the girl Monday morning and asked her permission for the three of them and an adult to meet and resolve this. They could have chosen a different teacher, one that could listen to the conversation in Spanish and lead with accuracy and comprehension, but they didn't. As I sat in, I could only monitor the inflections, and a few words I knew piquing my interest. Before long, I had to interrupt the process. I explained that I didn't catch everything, but I could tell that the young lady wasn't convinced that the apology was sincere. I asked her to describe to him how she felt when he was around her. Within a few sentences, he was broken; sobbing and begging for her 'pardon'. It wasn't over yet, God was working and I sat in amazement, unable to contribute a single word.(cont.)

 it's Hot!
 Doughnuts are not* the only thing with that claim. The firestorms of life purge and refine, the heat makes it soft, tempering you with time. #1. Be patient, if you're trying to sharpen the iron, you must work on it when it's cooled-off. #2. Banging-away on cold iron wastes energy, Re-heat and make sure your calling. #3. Pray for God to give wisdom and discernment for when to whet and when to strike. Ecl. 10:10 ; Isaiah 41:6,7

Certainly, it was a tender moment for all of us. Afterward, the only thing I said was, "How does it feel to be forgiven? Wouldn't you like God to forgive you too?" Then the other two students got down on the floor, sat at his feet presenting Wonderful Words of Life in Spanish; so eloquently, so divinely that only God could get the glory! - Sublime Gracia how sweet the sound.

There, in the solace of the room, the words of David's 51st Psalm came flooding in to my soul. How many of us have feared the presence of God when we have offended Him, How long had we struggled in the weight and worry of our sin knowing we need only ask for His forgiveness to be reconciled. How have we gossiped in the ears of those that need salvation, to the shame of the outcome? How rare have been the opportunities to observe the lessons in real-time action, unable to assist because of your weakness in the language but experienced in the groaning which cannot be uttered? When was the last time you sobbed over your sin and experienced the grace of God on your ministry? Yes, your ministry; for we have all been given the ministry of reconciliation.

You can begin praying for students under your tutelage; for we all are teaching. Not necessarily by lecturing, but certainly by example.

Church Update!

Praise the Lord! The church in Ate has just voted-in an indigenous Peruvian Pastor, Daniel Aguilar.

Also, we are happy to see a couple from the church which is beginning deputation. Their desire is to plant a church near the area of the jungle where he was born.

Leaving the USA for a survey trip in 2009 ignited so many thoughts of what God's Will was that I wanted to take them all on! That was just about the size of a mustard seed in a sandstorm. Peter quickly learned; In the walk of faith, nothing will satisfy you if you don't get to a point of stepping off the boat. Nothing can keep you above the angry surf without Christ lifted above the waves. You have to make a conscience choice to go or remain; the communion with Christ is not in the boat.

We arrived here in Peru by going through doors that kept opening up to another door, and another. Each Revelation 3:20 door is a test of your faith. Each wave is a challenge for you to cross. We have to stay focused on The Lord if we're going to remain above the waves. Pray that God would increase our faith.

I will always look at doors as divine opportunity. It's been the way He has always led us,

We can't overemphasize it, Keep praying!
